Hortus Urbis is the first Ancient Roman Edible garden in Rome. Appointed by the Appia Antica Park, Zappata Romana together with the generous contribution of all the shared gardens of the city, many associations and private citizens has activated a new public space in the superb green area aside the Almone river, near the park's facilities and administration offices. The ongoing project on Sunday mornings foresees workshops for children aside the gardening and planting work with families. The project is supported by Cooperativa Coraggio, Giardinieri Sovversivi Romani, Eutorto, Orti Urbani Garbatella, Slow Food, Ies Abroad, the Province of Rome and the 11th Municipality, Istituto Tecnico Agrario Statale "E. Sereni", GustoLab Institute, IES Abroad, Studio Arturo.
